PROJECT WORTH
SAFE ADULTS, SAFE CHOICES, AND YOUR BRIGHT LIGHT

You are important. You deserve to feel safe.

YOU ARE IMPORTANT

Your body, feelings, and voice matter. Safe adults listen, respect boundaries, and help you feel protected.

If someone asks you to hide something or does something that feels wrong, it is not your fault.

SAFE ADULTS

- Listen when you say stop or you feel uncomfortable
- Respect your space and boundaries
- Do not ask you to hide touching, messages, gifts, or time together
- Help you talk to trusted adults
- Want you to feel safe and supported

SECRETS AND SURPRISES

- Surprises are happy and shared soon
- Unsafe secrets can make you feel worried or uncomfortable
- Tell a trusted adult about touching, gifts, pictures, messages, or anything that feels unsafe or confusing

YOUR BODY AND BOUNDARIES MATTER

You can say:

"No." "Stop." "I don't like that." "I need space." "I am going to tell someone."

You may choose how you show affection. You do not have to touch anyone just to be polite.

Health care for your body should be explained, and a trusted caregiver should know whenever possible.

SAFE TOUCH

Safe touch is respectful and agreed to by everyone.

When both people say yes, it may include hugs, high fives, or fist bumps.

You can change your mind or say no at any time.

CONCERNING BEHAVIOR

Tell a trusted adult if someone:

- Tries to get you alone
- Gives gifts or attention and asks you to hide it
- Asks to see, photograph, or touch you in a way that feels uncomfortable
- Sends private messages or asks for personal images
- Uses pressure, threats, guilt, or fear
- Makes you feel unsafe, confused, or trapped

KEEP TELLING

Tell a parent, caregiver, teacher, counselor, coach, school staff member, law enforcement officer, or another trusted adult.

If one person does not help, tell someone else.

Keep telling until someone helps.

REMEMBER

- It is never your fault
- Speaking up is brave
- You deserve safety and support
- Your worth and your light belong to you

Your body matters. Your voice matters. Your light matters.
